

Year 1 of Trump Administration

While the Trump Administration advances a more pro-employer agenda, employers doing business in IL should pay close attention to key legislative and case law developments. Management-side Labor Attorney Julie Proscia will discuss how changes in the political landscape are impacting a variety of topics including wage/hour enforcement, safety & health, paid leaves, employee misclassification, immigration, etc.

Speaker Bio:

Julie Proscia

Partner, Smith Amundsen

Julie is a partner in Smith Amundsen's St. Charles office and a member of the firm's Labor & Employment Practice Group concentrating her practice in both employment litigation and traditional labor issues. She has extensive experience representing employers in federal, state and administrative venues, including a trial practice at the Illinois Human Rights Commission, National Labor Relations Board, and Department of Labor. Her trial experience ranges from discrimination and retaliation to non-competition/non-solicitation, wage, hour, and unfair labor practice issues. Julie also actively assists employers and human resource professionals in the legal pitfalls of the employment relationship including the hiring process, policies and procedures, employee handbooks, employment agreements and the termination/separation process.
